Reference:

Description

This pair of 1930's machine age drop ceiling lights are from an Arkansas Movie Theater. The milk glass globe is held in place by a stepped cap. Two nickel bands drop from the cap and terminate in "arrow heads" finals. The two bands support a nickel ring with two upward facing finals. Another ring encircles the bottom and features a star medallion, the medallion is repeated in a larger style on the top of the cap. From the ceiling cap an unusual chain supports the globe. The chain can be shortened by removing links. Presently the light drops 52" from the ceiling, the glass globe is 14" in diameter.
