Description

Maison Jansen was one of the first design firms to go global with offices not only in Paris but in North and South America and the Middle East. One of its most famous commissions was to assist in the design of the White House during the presidency of John F. Kennedy. This Maison Jansen coffee table has a black glass top inset in bronze and held up by "X" legs capped by a lion's head with brass stretcher joining the two ends. The table measures 17 ¾" x 33 ½" x 16 ½" high.
