

Large Peter Keil Painting of the Rolling Stones Berlin 1987

Reference:

MPD-000685

Description

Peter Kiel, German neo-expressionist, primitive folk art piece. Inspired originally by the abstract expressionist painting of Picasso and later by Miro, he studied extensively in Paris where the social scene formed not only his subjects, but his style - exuberant, bold and colorful. ... This is a large example of Keil's modern abstract work. The subjects are the Rolling Stones and it was created in Berlin in 1989. Some lifting of paint. The piece is framed and under glass. It is signed on the back by the artist. Please excuse the reflections in the glass.
